

Bridging the cultural gaps for national and international colleagues to get the best collaboration under this challenging time in Myanmar

It includes three separate sessions plus the trainer's report about issues and expectations of both international and national sides when working together and recommendations to achieve the best organizational collaboration in Myanmar.

Moderator and Consultant: Hana Bui, intercultural trainer and bestselling author about Myanmar who is currently living in Yangon.

Who should attend:

International organizations in Myanmar and coming to Myanmar

International organizations with remote management of expatriates

Myanmar organizations hiring expatriates

Objective:

Bridging the cultural gaps between national and international colleagues for the best collaboration under the unstable and challenging time in Myanmar

Methodology:

- Interactive and tailor-made with a coaching approach
- The facilitator will provide key questions for participants' preparations before the sessions

Contents:

- 2-hour session with the representative of national/Myanmar employees (max 7 people with good English skills from various functions and locations). It is to empower Myanmar colleagues to "speak out" freely. They can do it much easier talking with a third professional party (the moderator).
 Topics: issues when working with expatriates in this challenging time and
 - expectation about how expatriates should work with them
- 1-hour session with the expatriates of the company (max 5 people).
 Topics: issues when working with Myanmar colleagues and expectation about how Myanmar colleagues should work with them. Updates about the current feelings and thoughts of Myanmar colleagues.
- 3-hour joint session (both sides together): it is to introduce Myanmar culture and reveal the possible misunderstandings between both sides. It helps both sides speak out and interact openly about their issues when working together, under the trainer's moderation. It will help improve the effectiveness of intercultural communication in the organization.

Topics: Updates of the current situation in Myanmar, Myanmar cultural values and business practices – related issues and feedback from both sides, facilitation for mutual understanding and improving intercultural communication.

• The final report provided by the consultant Hana Bui: about issues and expectations of both international and national sides and recommendations for achieving the best intercultural collaboration under this challenging time.
